

WHITE PAPER INFO GUIDE |

A White Paper is by definition a piece of writing, written to help solve a problem. The Not For Sale White Paper series works towards the ultimate purpose of creating a pool of academic research pertaining to the abolition modern-day slavery - by creating a scholarly response to the reemergence of the global slave trade and by strengthening and encouraging the academic community's engagement in the modern abolitionist movement.

An NFS White Paper is a scholarly piece of original research, ranging from a report or op-ed article to post-grad thesis work - all aimed at finding an innovative solution to the prevalence of human trafficking.

Disclaimer:

A Not For Sale White Paper must be your own original research that you (the author) has the right to publish. All submitting authors will be expected to indemnify the Not For Sale Campaign (NFSC) against any intellectual property claim that may arise from your submission. By submitting a piece of work, you are thereby granting the NFSC the right to publish the work on the White Papers section of the Academy web site or any other web site affiliated with the NFSC. All other publication rights will remain with the author.

To Author a NFS White Paper:

The format and layout of a NFS White Paper should be presented in a professional manner – the design should therefore enhance the content not undermine it. Each submission should include a title, authors name, affiliated educational institution or organization and an abstract.

All submissions should be sent to theacademy@notforsalecampaign.org, allowing one month for review. Accepted authors will be contacted directly.
